PRESIDENT'S APPEAL IS GIVEN APPROVAL

Utterances on Hyphenated Americanism Create Discussion in New York.

TAKES OVER THUNDER OF COL. ROOSEVELT

Friends of Former President Think It a Shame, While the Public Laughs.

BY N. O. MESSENGER.

NEW YORK, October 14.—President Wilson's significant utterances on hyphenated Americanism created a widespread discussion in this city, which contains a larger number of more kinds of "hyphenated Americans" than any other community in the republic, for there are in greater New York three hundred and thirty thousand Irish-Americans, Italian-Americans, French-Americans, German-Americans, Scandinavian-Americans, Polish-Americans, Graeco-Americans and so on.

You never hear of "Jewish-Americans," however. The hyphen has never existed. The Jewish vote is spoken of, but only in connection with domestic politics, and with political subdivisions of other Americans. Neither does one hear of "English-Americans" or "Scottish-Americans." They are either British or American.

It is well known, of course, that in the colonies of these hyphenated Americans, their separate quarters, their newspapers, their restaurants, but they assimilate in education and business with the native born and take keen interest in politics once they are naturalized.

It would seem evident from the trend of public expressions that President Wilson's clarion note of appeal and warning in meeting with general approval here. That the time was opportune none can deny, and that New York should be deeply interested is equally evident, since here are located the headquarters of a vigorous propaganda effect of which is designed to be the lessening of neutrality of certain American citizens or residents of foreign extraction.

Beats Roosevelt to It.

New Yorkers today are chuckling over one slight of the discussion raised by the President's speech. This has to do with Col. Roosevelt's speech Tuesday night to the Knights of Columbus on the same subject. Said Col. Roosevelt, President Wilson "beat him to it" by twenty-four hours. This topic is one of the political staple leading features of his political stock in trade, and here comes the President to calmly appropriate it ahead of him.

William J. Bryan used to accuse the colonel of stealing his political raiment, and lately the colonel has had a dose of his own medicine, the President taking over national preparedness and now the hyphenates.

"Isn't it a shame?" the colonel's friends are asking, while the rest of the public laughs.

The speech of the colonel Tuesday night while in the nature of a "me too," declaration, and serving to emphasize and endorse the President's lead, brought out expressions of popular sentiment toward the subject which was most pronounced. He talked before an audience of the Knights of Columbus, whose membership affiliates with one particular religious sect. There were 3,000 men in the hall and another thousand outside.

His Opinion of Hyphenates.

The colonel was in fine form and enjoyed the uproarious welcome which greeted him. His opinion of the hyphenates was expressed in such sentences as these:

"There is no such thing as the hyphenated American who is a good American."

"The only man who is a good American is the man who is an American and nothing else."

"The man who calls himself an American citizen and who yet shows by his actions that he is primarily the citizen of foreign land plays a thoroughly mischievous part in the life of the body politic. He has no place here and the sooner he returns to the land to which he feels his real heart allegiance the better it will be for every good American. There is absolutely certain way of bringing this nation to ruin, of preventing all possibility of its continuing to be a great nation at all, would be to permit it to become a tangle of squabbling nationalities, an intricate knot of German-Americans, Irish-Americans, English-Americans, French-Americans, Scandinavian-Americans or Italian-Americans, each preserving its separate nationality, each at heart feeling more sympathy with Europeans of that nationality than with the other citizens of the American republic. The men who do not become Americans and who are hyphenated Americans, and there ought not to be room for them in this country."

Then the colonel took up another subject, and one which you will hear a good deal about in the next few weeks, before election day—religious intolerance in politics. This is the burning question in Massachusetts and plays a part in New York.

Col. Roosevelt took a strong stand against the intrusion of religious prejudices in American politics and went to uttermost lengths in anathematizing those who would profit from such divisions of American citizens, placing them in the category of the condemned hyphenates.

Attention is called to this speech because it is the opening gun in one feature of the pending political campaign which will reverberate for some time.

RETURN TO THE TILFISH TO TABLES OF EPICURES

Delectable Article of Diet Is Again Accessible, Government Bureau Asserts.

Denizen of the Deep Seas Which Strangely Disappeared in 1885 as Mysteriously Returns.

Some ye who have been eating fish only since 1882 and taste the savory tilfish, brought up from the depths of the warm gulf stream; for such a bit of palatable meat has never been served since the year named, though it was on the table of all fish lovers before that date. In that year the mysteries of the deep seas were made more mystifying by the killing of billions of tilfish. They disappeared in that year when the gulf stream took a new course, and the fish have come back in numbers just as mysteriously as they met their death. And with the appearance of these fish come numerous recipes compiled by the bureau of fisheries for tilfish dishes that will make the mouth water.

Discovered in 1879.

This sea product was discovered in 1879, the story goes, when a schooner off Nantucket caught several thousand pounds of a "strange and handsomely colored fish," to which the fish commission then gave the name Ilopholus chamoelolepis, but, for short, called it "tilfish." While the bureau was engaged in locating its feeding grounds the tilfish was to all appearances practically "exterminated by a mysterious disturbance along the edge of the coastal slope."

"The first news of this disaster," says the bulletin, "came in March, 1882, when the master of a vessel reported that he had sailed for sixty-nine miles through a mass of dead and dying fish floating on the surface. His first statement was that they covered a distance of fifteen miles, explaining later that he feared to put his reputation for veracity in jeopardy if he stated the whole truth. Other vessels in March and April of the same year reported similar experiences, and from the various accounts it was estimated that the dead fish covered an area 150 miles long and twenty-five miles wide, and that upward of 1,400,000,000 tilfish had perished."

Cause Not Definitely Known.

"What killed them is not certain, but investigations of the water temperatures at the bottom, made by the fisheries bureau both before and since occurrence indicate that it may have been due to a sudden chilling of the water. The tilfish, like the cod, is a bottom dweller, but, unlike the cod, it is of family accustomed to the warmer waters of the tropics. It finds a congenial temperature where the edge of the gulf stream touches the sea bottom, on a slope and steep mountain side, and is therefore but a narrow strip, on which the water is neither too shallow nor too deep. The gulf stream is a great oceanic river. There is evidence that about the time of the disaster the tilfish the gulf stream was receding, and as it moved offshore its warmth no longer reached the bottom and the fish and other animals dwelling there were left in the chilly waters which took its place."

It is reasonable to suppose, that, being habituated to a warm and equable submarine climate, they were killed by the cold wave which enveloped them. A few years afterward, while the gulf stream was still off soundings, investigations showed that the tilfish was gradually approaching the coast, and it was predicted that in 1892 it would be flowing over a depth in which it had never before been found. The bottom of the New England coast, on which the tilfish formerly had abounded.

Prediction Is Verified.

"The prediction came true, and the fisheries schooner Grampus, in the summer of that year, caught a few fish on the old ground, although persistent search in the preceding ten years had failed to reveal a single specimen. Evidently the return of congenial conditions caused the fish to immigrate from areas in which the mortality had not been so placed on sale in excellent condition. However, two things appear essential to give it the place which its economic and edible qualities and the acquaintance of the fishermen with its abundance, ease of capture and the accessibility of its habitat, and the appreciation by the public of its excellence as food."

The bureau now is engaged in educating the fishermen, and, as stated, already has prepared recipes for the preparation of the fish for the table.

COOK BEEFSTEAK DINNER AT COMMERCIAL CLUB

W. C. Johnson and John Dolph Offer in Kitchen, to General Satisfaction.

W. C. Johnson, who is in the express business, and John Dolph, who is an insurance man, last night forgot their respective callings for the time being and donning the regulation white uniform of "honest to goodness" chefs, made their way into the kitchen at the Commercial Club and superintended the preparation of another one of those beefsteak dinners that have made the organization famous.

George W. Harris, who is a photographer, forgot all about developer and fixer, and played the role of restaurateur, for, as chairman of the entertainment committee, he felt responsible for the success of the meal and went to great effort to see that everything was served in the best of style. H. C. C. Stiles forgot about zinc cuts for the evening and joined in with Cuno H. Rudolph in playing the role of reception committee. Banking details were not on Mr. Rudolph's mind at the time.

The beefsteak feast was served in scheduled time, and every one declared that the dishes which constituted it had been prepared "just right." Then came the entertainment portion of the program. Among those who participated in it were Wilton Lackaye, Miss Madge Borth, both of whom are appearing at one of the local theaters this week, and D. T. Curtin, a newspaper correspondent who has recently returned from the front in Europe. Several members of the club also contributed to the entertainment.
